Honoiulu, on Friday, June

The Neill Company is well balanced. In an "An American Citizen" there are no supernumeraries and no one struts to the over-shadowing of the others. There is some pathos in the lines but mostly they are written to make the audience laugh. Perhaps if one found any fault it would be in that Neill did not make more of the love scene in the last act when he finds his wife's heart all his and when her sweet face is upturned for the seal on that love which een levied, to be due and had existed so long under clouds. But the lat day of August, 1900, Heresford Krueger or Carew has alarray from September 1st, ready made it patent that he is busiinquent September 30th, ness-like and full of dispatch in all things so it is probably his way of receiving the best thing in life-a woman's love-and persons of sentimental turn who hoped for a prolonged billing all exercises conducted in English. and cooling had no right to look for more than they got.
